MEET
MAYA

She is in love. She wants it to last.

Maya is twenty nine, she lives in Atlanta, and she just got engaged. She does not only want a beautiful wedding, she wants a love that lasts. Yet the journey ahead, from planning, to marriage, to building a life together, is one she is mostly walking alone.

THE PROBLEM

Couples face love's biggest moments alone

From deciding to commit, to the wedding, to building a life together, couples move through the most important milestones of their lives with fragmented tools and almost no community. The support that exists is transactional, and it ends the day after the wedding.

LOVE THAT LASTS

The wedding is the beginning, not the end

After the wedding, Betrothy keeps couples close, with shared experiences, trips, events, and date nights, inside a community that celebrates every anniversary and milestone. It is what keeps love strong, and it is the next set of tools we are building.

WHY

The moment for a company built around love

Two shifts make this the moment. AI can now do the heavy lifting, planning a wedding by conversation and creating things like a custom song. And couples want depth and meaning, not templates. The old tools are transactional and stop at the wedding, which leaves the lasting story open.

MAR
KET

The lifelong love and celebration economy

Betrothy sits across the whole arc of a couple's life together, anchored by the wedding and extending into the gifts, experiences, and milestones that follow.

want a wedding that feels like them

An aerial, high-angle photograph of a large crowd of people gathered on a floor with a large-scale black and white checkered pattern. The people are seen from above, appearing as small figures in various poses and activities, creating a sense of a busy, communal event. The overall tone is dark and monochromatic, with the text overlaid in white.

MOAT

Every wedding brings a hundred people into a love story.

They become the next couples, the next guests, and the next members of the community. The relationship deepens over years, not a single transaction, which is something point tools cannot replicate.

BUSINESS MODEL

High-margin AI now, a lifetime of love later

We earn from day one. Couples buy AI credits that we sell at about twice our cost, and we take a small fee on registry cash gifts. Over time, the vendor marketplace, plus experiences and gifting across the marriage, extend the revenue for years.

GO-TO-MARKET

Win one metro deep, then ride two unfair channels

We win one city at a time, carried by three channels. Every wedding brings in the next couples through its guests. The church gives us a trusted path to couples through marriage ministries and the pastors who marry them. And the African community brings large, communal weddings that already run on rails like Paystack.

COMPETITION

No one is building a community for the whole journey

The Knot and Zola serve parts of the wedding, but they are transactional and they stop at the wedding day. The newer couples apps are warm but narrow, and engagement fades. Betrothy is the only one building a lasting community and a toolkit for the entire journey of love.

TRACT
ION

A complete toolkit and a community

The product spans the planning companion and the studios, the wedding sites, the marketplace, and the community feed and messaging. We have also mapped out our church and African community launch paths.

FOUNDER

Why me

Andrew earned his Master of Information Management and Systems from UC Berkeley's School of Information in May 2026. His final research project studied how Gen Z engages with AI in dating and romance, and what makes a connection feel authentic instead of transactional. That work is the foundation for Betrothy, a product built to help couples build toward marriage and a lasting life together, not to gamify it.

ASK

Raising $150,000 to prove the loop in our first market.

Post-money SAFE at a $1,000,000 cap, about 15% to friends and family. Use of funds: go-to-market, product and AI, church and community partnerships, operations.
